"The Catholic Library and the Intellectual Life"

This theme and the talks centered around it held the intense interest of over 700 delegates who attended the Catholic Library Association's annual conference.

The complete text of every talk given at the conference may be found in . . .

THE PROCEEDINGS

35th Annual Conference
Chicago, Illinois
1959

Some excerpts from The Proceedings:

The Catholic intellectual stands as the eternal answer to non-Catholic critics who mistakingly believe that all Catholics think and speak alike in every subject from art and architecture to a balanced budget . . .
Jerome G. Kerwin, Ph.D.

The Bible is an old book, a library of old books. In its pages we hear the voice of God speaking to us through men of an ancient civilization and an alien mentality . . .
Rev. John F. McConnell, M.M.

The American Medical school has been ruined by its misplaced worship of science. . . . The bigger the medical school, the bigger the budget, the greater the research, and the worse the school . . .
Herbert Ratner, M.D.

I think the philosophy of reading is this: I read so that I may grow in a sense of human brotherhood . . .
Rev. Harold C. Gardiner, S.J.

Without the power to dream a little and to look beyond the immediate present, how can there be release and freedom for the spirit? . . .
Anne Thaxter Eaton

Intelligence now has a vocation in the world, a vocation focused and made steady in the vocation of the Word to humanity, of which He is form and image . . .
Rev. Daniel Berrigan, S.J.

"Forming Lifetime Reading Habits," the Theme of the 1958 CLA Convention, was interpreted by more than 30 librarians, educators and critics . . .

Censorship is not an act of positive perfection, but a mark of moral and intellectual failure in some elements of a society. . . .

Dr. Vernon J. Bourke.

For Catholics, censorship is a noble function. For them, control, neither negates nor abridges intellectual freedom. . . .

Rev. Redmond Burke, C.S.V.

How can a person be a good Catholic and a good librarian at one and the same time? . . .

Rev. Nathaniel Sonntag, O.F.M. Cap.
